Aim: The essential aim of research article writing is to communicate original research findings and contribute to the existing body of knowledge in a clear, concise, and well-structured manner.

Objectives:

Communication of Findings: The primary objective is to effectively communicate the research findings, methodology, and results to the scientific or academic community in a clear, organized, and coherent manner.

Contributing to Knowledge: Research articles aim to contribute to the existing body of knowledge by presenting new insights, discoveries, or advancements in a specific field, thereby advancing the collective understanding of a subject.

Peer Review and Validation: Research articles undergo a peer-review process to ensure the quality and validity of the research. The objective is to receive feedback, critique, and validation from experts in the field to maintain the integrity of the research.

Outcomes:

Dissemination of Knowledge: Research articles provide a platform for researchers to share their findings with a wider audience, contributing to the dissemination of knowledge and advancing the understanding of a particular subject or field.

Peer Recognition and Validation: Publication of research articles in reputable journals or conferences enhances the researcher's reputation and credibility within their academic or scientific community. It serves as a form of peer recognition and validation of the quality and significance of their work.

Contribution to Research Progress: Research articles become part of the body of literature in a specific field, serving as references and sources for future research. They contribute to the collective progress of knowledge and can inspire further studies and discoveries in the same or related areas.

Summary Report of Essential of Research Article Writing

The "Essentials of Research Article Writing" workshop was conducted on 1st March 2023 at Mechanical Seminar Hall, organized by the Artificial Intelligence and Data Science Department. The workshop aimed to provide attendees with a comprehensive understanding of the key elements and skills required for successful research article writing. Here is a summary of the event:

Day 1: Understanding the Basics

The first day of the workshop focused on laying the foundation for effective research article writing.
